School stars

Donal Friel, from London Fields Primary School, Jaki Walcott-Nelson, from Clapton Girls' Academy and Richard Mitchell, from Haggerston School receive their School Stars awards

HACKNEY's school staff were celebrated at an awards ceremony last month.
The School Stars awards

recognise everyone that contributes to school life in Hackney, from teachers to caretakers and cleaners.

Richard Mitchell, from Haggerston School, Donal Friel, from London Fields Primary School and Jaki

Walcott-Nelson, from Clapton Girls' Academy were chosen by a judging panel from nominations sent in by colleagues, pupils and parents for the positive impact they have had on students.

WINDRUSH DAY FUND

WINDRUSH community groups across the borough are being encouraged to apply for funding for small projects to celebrate Windrush Day on 22 June.

Last month, the Council was awarded £10,000 from the Government's Windrush Day grant scheme to help educate, commemorate and celebrate the outstanding contribution of the Windrush generation and their descendants.

Hackney's fund will see a celebration for Windrush elders take place at Stoke Newington Town Hall, an intergenerational Caribbean baking project for elders and young people, and a cricket tournament.

Some £4,000 of that funding is also being made to Hackney's community groups, which can apply for up to £400 for a project or event around one of the themes established by Hackney's Windrush steering group.

These are: food, arts and culture, sports, style and hair, economic well-being, entrepreneurship and finance, housing, work and employment, civil rights and civic engagement.

Cllr Carole Williams, Cabinet Member for Employment, Skills and Human Resources, said: "Hackney has a large Caribbean population, and as such we welcome the chance to offer these grants to fund grassroots community events to celebrate and commemorate the borough's Windrush generation, as well as educating the wider community and young people on the importance of this community's contribution to British life."

The MV Empire Windrush, which docked at Tilbury in June 1948, was the first ship to bring Commonwealth citizens from the Caribbean to the UK, to help rebuild Britain after the Second World War.

Under the current Government's 'hostile environment' policies, an estimated 50,000 people faced the risk of deportation if they had never formalised their residency status and did not have the documentation to prove it.

On 3 April, the Government announced it will pay up to £200 million in compensation to people whose lives were damaged by the Home Office's mistaken classification of long-term British residents as illegal immigrants.

Cllr Williams said: "Though it has taken far too long to get to this stage, it is reassuring that the Windrush compensation scheme appears to have no cap, and right that the Home Secretary is talking in terms of aiming to 'right the wrongs' of a 'terrible mistake that should never have happened'.

"We now need clarity that the scheme will be simple, reasonable and transparent, with allocations that fully redress the damage caused by such inhumane treatment."

NEW Council rules are set to safeguard offices in areas like Shoreditch's Tech City, Dalston and Hackney Central from being turned into poor-quality, unaffordable housing after Government ministers refused to extend protections for businesses.

The rules, approved by the Council's Cabinet on 25 March, will mean any proposals to convert offices into homes will have to go through the normal planning process, rather than using Government-imposed loopholes to bypass it completely.

In 2013, after successful Council lobbying, Hackney's town centres were given a special exemption from Government planning changes called 'permitted development rights'.

Without the exemption, these rules would have meant developers no longer needed to apply for planning permission for conversions from an office to a residential use, or provide any affordable housing, contribute to school places or fund local facilities.

Ministers have refused to extend the exemption granted in 2013 after it expires in May, which is why the Council has brought in its own rules, called an Article 4 Direction.

A Royal Institute of Chartered Surveyors report last year revealed that office-to-residential conversions were producing 'extremely poor-quality housing', with just 30 per cent of homes meeting national space standards, while the Town and Country Planning Association has called the conversions 'slums'.

Last month, the Housing, Communities and Local Government Select Committee recommended the Government should suspend permitted development rights.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Planning, Business and

Protecting the planning process

“We are determined to stand up for quality and affordability... these Article 4 Directions help the Council do just that”

Investment, said: “Ministers are ignoring the advice of councillors, MPs and businesses by continuing to support the unchecked conversion of office spaces in our town centres.

“Where the Government is pulling the rug out from underneath Hackney's businesses, we're making sure the Council is stepping in to put it back. By using its own planning powers the Council can help protect the offices and workspaces along our high streets from the kind of rampant market-led development that chases short-term profits at the expense of quality and affordability.

“We are determined to stand up for quality and affordability, ensuring that as our borough changes everyone can benefit and no one gets left behind. These Article 4 Directions help the Council do just that.”

The Council's new policy follows specific new rules to force developers to reprovide genuinely affordable workspace in Hackney Wick, measures to protect shops and laundrettes from being converted into homes, and the Council's extensive conversation with residents, businesses and voluntary groups in Dalston about rapid changes in the area.

OVER £750,000 has been allocated to voluntary and community sector (VCS) groups.

Last month, the Council's Cabinet approved its new Voluntary and Community Sector Advice Grants, which protects the £770,000 fund allocated to independent advice services for residents.

The advice grants are one part of the Council's wider £2.6million community grants programme.

They are allocated every two years through a competitive process that identifies which organisations will best meet the grant objectives.

These are set out in the advice grant framework, which has been shaped by three years of working closely with voluntary sector partners to co-design an improved advice service.

This work has helped the Council and local advice providers to understand how the current advice service system is working, and how it can be improved to deliver a service that better understands and meets the needs of residents.

Cllr Caroline Selman, Cabinet Member for Community Safety, Policy, and the Voluntary Sector, said: "We value the important role that advice services play in Hackney. That is why we have protected the advice grant budget and worked in partnership with advice providers over the last three years to co-design an

"While some organisations have been allocated a smaller share of grant funding this year, the recommended combination of providers will result in an updated service that better meets the needs of residents, delivering what matters to them."

Community chest grants are also available for local groups to deliver short term or one-off activities. Organisations can apply for up to £1,000 to deliver projects which contribute to the Hackney equality objective 'to foster good relations by building a strong sense of community, neighbourliness and pride'.

Applications are open until 12noon on 15 April.

News in brief

Businesses to be given Brexit management strategies

HACKNEY businesses are being invited to learn how to manage their way through Brexit.

London Growth Hub has partnered with the Council to deliver three workshops in the borough on 'Navigating Brexit for small and medium enterprises' (SMEs) between April and July. The workshops are designed to support businesses in building their resilience under any Brexit outcome.

The Growth Hub programme was launched last month and aims to train 1,500 SMEs in London by the end of year. Hackney, known for its thriving food and drink culture, will host a session on 30 April tailored specifically for the hospitality industry.

This will be followed by general sessions for all sectors on 6 June and 1 July. For more info, and to book your free place, visit: www.investinhackney.org/brexit

Help the homeless in Hackney through TAP London donations

VISITORS to Hackney Town Hall and the Service Centre can support local homelessness charities by tapping their contactless card to donate £3 to a good cause.

The TAP London donation points are located at the reception of Hackney Town Hall and by the cafe in Hackney Service Centre. All the money that is raised is split equally between charities in the London

Homelessness Charities Group. Funds are spent on providing essential services to help rough sleepers to cope with the day-to-day but also to forge a path away from life on the streets. Find out more at: www.taplondon.org

DVDs and CDs at Hackney's libraries have been made free for residents to borrow

DVDs and CDs at Hackney's libraries are now available to rent free of charge.

With over 26,000 DVDs and 27,000 CDs available, Hackney's libraries have a huge collection of films, music and audio books to rent.

From family favorites by Disney such as 'Peter

Pan', recent releases such as 'Black Panther' or classics such as Alfred Hitchcock's 'The Birds', there is something for everyone.

The charge for renting DVDs and CDs used to be £1 and 50p respectively. Now, the service joins a host of other free-to-access digital materials including e-magazines, e-books and mp3s, which can all be borrowed for free with a library card.

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member for Energy, Sustainability and Community Services, said: "Library services are at the heart of our communities. We hope that, by making CD and DVD loans free, even more people will borrow these items and enjoy entertainment at home, as part of the sharing economy. If you don't already have a library card, this is another reason to get one and enjoy thousands of books, films, music and magazines for free."

THE Rio has weathered so many ups and downs in cinema history," says Andrew Woodyatt, its marketing and development manager.

"It has been used as a bomb shelter in two world wars and has been continuously redeveloped and renamed. It even hosted adult striptease shows for a bit."

Today, however, the cinema in Kingsland High Street, E8, is at the centre of the community and there are two anniversaries to celebrate: it is 40 years since the cinema officially became a non-profit charity, and 110 years since the very first cinema opened on the site.

Andrew chronicles the highs and lows of this iconic cinema.

Clara Ludski, 1910

"DALSTON was a vibrant and affluent community, a short hackney-horse cab ride from the City," says Andrew.

"Prussian émigré Clara Ludski, who lived with her cabinet maker husband Walter on Sandringham Road, realised the growing business potential of 'moving pictures' and employed local young architect W E Trent to plan the conversion of her auction room at 105 Kingsland High Street into a 175-seat 'electric picture house'.

"The Kingsland Palace was among the first full-time cinemas in London and was such a success that, in 1911, Clara expanded into number 107, next door, doubling the capacity and renaming the cinema The Kingsland Palace of Animated Pictures."

Kingsland Empire

"CLARA decided to create a purpose-built cinema, closing The Palace in 1913 and replacing it with the very grand Kingsland Empire Cinema, which had seating for 956 and room for another 174 people to stand.

"The Empire was a huge architectural statement on the high street, with its vast dome and two-storey arched window and ornate classical exterior in yellow London brick with stone detailing. It was also equipped with a luxurious tea room."

World War One was, however, underway: "The Kingsland Empire was able to use its large basement area as a shelter for customers and residents when bombing raids took place, and even advertised that it was 'Zeppelin proof'. This dubious claim came close to being tested with the nearest bombs landing in Stoke Newington and Shoreditch."

Interior of the Classic, 1950s

"THE Empire closed its mahogany Edwardian doors for the last time for complete reconstruction. Its exterior was stripped of all classical detailing, the brick and stone was rendered over, its huge dome was removed, and a new cinema was built within the existing walls and roof – the Classic Cinema Dalston."

The 'Ideal Kinema' records that: 'The exterior was streamlined into a fluted curved corner over the entrance with a massive 33ft-high metal sign lit by neon tubes advertising the building to Kingsland High Street. The interior was decorated in a modern style with sweeping lines, and the colouring is in a grey-blue and warm brown, and the seating a dark red, which is set off by red festoon tabs'.

Dalston Tatler Cinema Club ad, 1970s

1970

"IN its new guise as The Dalston Tatler Cinema Club, the cinema operated as 'cine variety', as an adult porno/striptease/burlesque house, in other words. Uncensored sexploitation films were shown as double bills and in between the features strippers took to the stage.

"Conventional features still ran from Thursday to Saturday, though many parents refused to let their children go to the Saturday morning children's club."

The Rio in late 1976

1975

"THE Tatler signage came down and the cinema reverted to being the Classic Cinema Dalston with a new blue colour scheme externally."

1979

"THE Rio became a not-for-profit company, a management structure that still continues today.

Rio ad, April 1979

It also became a champion of independent cinema and cult movies.

"Community groups contributed to the programme so that the cinema soon appealed to a wide range of groups – Turkish film and Bollywood fans, a crèche was set up to appeal to movie-loving mums, schemes were established to help the unemployed. It became the truly community cinema it remains today."

Queenie the cat is handed over

"THE Ace Cinema, in Stoke Newington, finally gave up and their house cat Queenie was handed over to the Rio, where she lived out a very pampered and sedentary life terrorising the mice and customers alike.

"Known as the 'Rio Prowler' she would leap unannounced onto customers laps during the film, in the hope of somewhere warm to sleep or to gain a morsel of food."

"THE Rio was awarded Grade II listed status, following its painstaking refurbishment in its original Art Deco style, right down to matching the original paint colours and lighting."

2017

Rio screen two

"FOLLOWING a successful fundraising campaign called RIOgeneration, a second screen opened in the main basement space, seating 28 people in leather armchair seats."

"THERE is a new basement bar opening this month – that will also be a state-of-the-art meeting space for the community to use.

"New high-tech boilers are also being installed next month to reduce the carbon footprint, and more green plans including swapping lighting for LEDs and aiming for zero to landfill with a progressive recycling policy. The Rio's future is not only looking bright, but green."

STILL wouldn't call myself an artist," says Reuben Dangoor. "The art world has always been a difficult concept for me. It's quite elitist, there are barriers to lots of people even enjoying art, let alone making it. Barriers to them going into a gallery and feeling welcome."

He may have to get comfortable with the term. After all, what else do you call someone who has had an exhibition at the Tate Britain in their 20s?

Reuben was born in Hackney: "Mum was a bit of a hippie so she had me at home, just off the Chatsworth Road," he says.

His artistic parents encouraged him to draw and, he continues: "I was always at it. So it was a bit of a surprise for them when I said I wanted to study medicine."

Even more so because, at this point, Reuben was 25, had finished school and was working as an editor in a fashion studio. "I really wasn't enjoying it," he says, "So I looked about for a job that was the polar opposite. I wanted to do something that would involve helping people, day in day out."

Medicine seemed the obvious choice. Except for one small problem. "I hadn't taken chemistry or biology at A-level," says Reuben, "So I had to go back to school to get them. I also spent six months volunteering in a hospital. It was... hard!"

When he finally got accepted into medical school, you might imagine he was elated. "Everyone congratulated me. Older members of my family would say: 'oh, your mother must be so proud'. But at the back of my mind, I already knew I was making a mistake. Being a doctor wasn't the right path for me. As much as I wanted to help people, I couldn't really be happy myself if I wasn't doing something creative."

Luckily, fate intervened. "Me and a friend had made a video, just for fun," he

Kids can pick up an old tablet and make amazing things. The internet has democratised all creative industries explains. "I was studying in Brighton, living in this basement flat with no internet and no phone reception when suddenly, the video went viral. Within a day of it surfacing, it was on the home page of YouTube. It was intense."

The video, 'Being a D*ckhead's Cool', parodied the hipster culture that was taking root in his childhood home and contained the immortal lines: 'Taking pictures on London Fields, up on the blog so everyone knows, we're having new age fun with a vintage feel'.

Reuben says: "Ad agencies started calling me up, asking me crazy things like: can you do the same thing, but for a gambling company? It was silly, but it made me realise there could be a way of making a living from doing what I loved."

He abandoned his studies and sent some of his illustrations to the comedy team behind the mockumentary series 'People Just Do Nothing'. They liked it and, when the show moved from online to the BBC, Reuben started making promotional artwork for the series.

Then the show's creators were asked to host 'Late at the Tate', and mentioned Reuben's artwork to the organisers. Which is how, in December 2015 and aged just 28, Reuben's exhibition 'Legends of the Scene' opened at the world-famous Tate Britain.

As befits someone who takes issue with the elitism in the art scene, it was an exhibition that turned stereotypes on their heads.

Modern grime artists were featured in the sorts of settings and poses usually reserved for the landed gentry. Skepta sat astride a horse. Wiley wore a suit of armour, Stormzy stood in a stately home. The show was a success and led to yet more opportunities; Stormzy asked him to design his upcoming tour; Reuben moved into music videos; his Instagram following mushroomed; and Jeremy Corbyn's special adviser called, having seen Reuben's illustration of the Labour leader dabbing.

Last year, hundreds of football fans bought prints of his illustrations charting England's World Cup journey.

Reuben says: "My favourite thing is when people tell me it's the first time they've connected with art, because it should be everyone, you know?"

"People have even got my work tattooed onto their bodies," he laughs. "And obviously it's very flattering but I also think: 'hold on! Are you sure you're going to want that in 20 years' time?!"

Despite his success, Reuben still works full time as a graphic designer. He says: "I work stupidly unhealthy hours sometimes, but my enthusiasm for an idea gives me the energy to carry on."

He makes much of his work digitally, on a Wacom tablet or an iPad Pro.

Reuben says: "This new technology is amazing, it's so responsive."

"Kids can pick up an old tablet and make amazing things. They can get it out there via Instagram. The internet has democratised all creative industries."

"Everyone has access to some form of tools now. Everyone has a voice. Sure, that makes the field more crowded, but it also leaves it wide open to anyone."

London Fields BBQs banned

BARBECUE use in London Fields will continue to be suspended this year as a result of damage, high volumes of rubbish and increases in air pollution in the park during the summer.

The increasing popularity of London Fields has led to a number of issues including scorched grass, high volumes of rubbish, noise and the use of sound systems, illegal trading, aggression and intimidation towards staff, and people urinating in public.

The estimated cost of managing the park during the summer months has grown to around £200,000 per year, including £90,000 for extra parks and cleaning staff, £16,000 to hire and empty bins, £60,000 for enforcement, £3,500 for fencing and £30,000 for cleaning.

The Council monitored air quality in and near the park last year. The results show that barbecuing is likely to be having a negative impact on local air quality, particularly at weekends.

On 87 per cent of the busiest days last summer, when residents reported high numbers of barbecues, levels of particulate matter exceeded the 'very high' Daily Air Quality Index criteria for one hour or more. The data suggests that barbecuing also resulted in longer periods (two or more hours) of 'very high' localised levels of particulate matter pollution.

However, after 26 July, when barbecue use was suspended, short-term levels of particulate matter were far less likely to be classed as medium, high or very high.

Suspension of barbecuing in London Fields will protect residents, park users and Council staff from the potential health effects of the smoke from barbecues and reduce the wider impacts that the barbecue area has had on the park.

The Council will continue to monitor air quality and other issues in the park.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor and Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care, Transport and Parks, said: "I want to welcome as many people as possible to our parks and green spaces.

"We're now asking people to bring a picnic instead of a barbecue so we can protect London Fields and its neighbours from unnecessary damage."

Nappy Bill launched to encourage use of real nappies

A NAPPY (Environmental Standards) Bill was celebrated last month at a Hackney Real Nappies Network event at the Round Chapel in Clapton.

The Bill is being brought forward by David Linden MP and is supported by local MP Meg Hillier and Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member for Energy, Sustainability and Community Services.

Alongside a system-wide change in nappy manufacture the Bill contains an incentive for local authorities to provide reusable nappy vouchers.

Hackney Council is one of the few local authorities in the country to offer reusable nappy vouchers through the Real Nappies for London Scheme.

Since 2007, real nappies have helped to avoid 1,300 tonnes of disposable nappies in the borough.

Parents who have chosen reusable nappies have also received £144,000, by claiming 2,666 real nappy vouchers, and collectively saved almost £1.5million through not buying throwaway nappies.

For more info on how to claim a real nappy voucher, see page 12, or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/nappies

News in brief

Two new Marshes litter pickers

TWO extra members of staff have been employed on Hackney Marshes to tackle the increasing amount of litter left behind after weekend matches.

Hackney Marshes has one of the biggest concentrations of pitches in Europe, with over 82 football, rugby and cricket pitches in the immediate vicinity.

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member for Energy, Sustainability, and Community Services, said: "It's simply unacceptable that the Marshes continue to be blighted by litter, particularly after football matches. As an interim measure, we're employing extra staff to tackle the issue before developing a new approach aimed at delivering a sustainable solution for this problem."

The new staff are being funded by the Council and GLL, and will be employed from 11.30am until 2.30pm on weekends to pick litter.

Clean Up Clapton art winners

TWO Hackney schools have been awarded prizes for an art competition held during last year's Clean Up Clapton event. Northwold Primary School, E5, was awarded best overall picture for their tapestry-style contribution, which included depictions of ideas for keeping the area clean.

Three prizes and a trophy for best individual contributions went to pupils at Al Falah Primary School, E5 (pictured).

Mohammad Abu Hussain, headteacher at Al Falah Primary School, said: "The children who received the certificate and vouchers for the competition have felt a great sense of achievement and in turn it has acted as a great source of encouragement for the rest of the students." The prizes were presented by the Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Clare Potter, on 22 March.

100 new trees planted in parks

ONE HUNDRED new trees have been planted across Hackney's parks, as part of the Mayor of London's Community Tree Planting Grants scheme.

Clapton Common, Daubeney Fields, Hackney Marshes, Haggerston Park, Millfields Park, Shepherdess Walk Park and Springfield Park were among the 11 sites that have received a variety of trees.

The planting included native trees such as English oak, field maple, birch and elm, as well as non-native trees such as walnut, zelkova, black pines and giant redwoods. Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor and Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care, Transport and Parks, said: "The trees we plant today will provide a healthy, beautiful environment now and for generations to come."

The Mayor of London's Community Tree Planting Grants scheme provided £23,418 towards the cost of the project.

Cheaper, greener, better nappies!

Thousands of parents are making the switch to real nappies.

Real cotton nappies are easy to use, soft on the skin and don't contain absorbent gels. They are cheaper than disposable ones, and could save you around £500 per baby.

Fantabuloso!

Until 20 April, Atom Gallery, 127 Green Lanes, N16 9DA

WHAT do you call an exhibition that celebrates superheroes, pop art and gay culture? Fantabuloso!

The latest exhibition to hit specialist print gallery Atom is named just that. Featuring the work of Villain, it plays with the language of Pop Art, wittily referencing Marvel illustrations and interweaving Polari (the secret language employed by the gay community through the 20th century).

It is camp, colourful and fabulously fun. It also, however, asks a more serious question: what if homosexuality had never been criminalised? Would the heroes we have inherited look different? This exhibition will feature a previously unseen series of archival giclée prints, along with several limited edition screenprints, all of which will be available to buy.

Laugh in the Face of Hate

29 April, Hackney Empire, 291 Mare Street, E8 1EJ

FEELING powerless in the face of world events? A stellar line up of comedians from around the world is assembling at Hackney Empire, encouraging you to 'laugh in the face of hate'.

Sarah Millican, Russell Howard, Al Murray and Omid Djalili are among the acts taking part in the benefit night which will raise money for the victims of the recent terrorist attack on two mosques in New Zealand. The show is organised and compered by comedian Jarred Christmas, who is himself from Christchurch where the terrorist attack took place.

"I am heartbroken by what has happened in my hometown," explained Jarred. "The only thing I'm good at is comedy and calling friends, so I called my incredible comedy friends and they answered. Their response has humbled me. So this is what we can do. An amazing night of comedy to let the world know that we are all better than this."

All aboard the pirate ship

HACKNEY education charity, The Literacy Pirates, has received a grant of £5,000 a year for the next three years by London Masons.

The Literacy Pirates – formerly the Hackney Pirates – work with young people aged nine to 13 years old to develop their literacy, confidence and perseverance skills.

The charity gives young people who are falling behind at school additional support in an exciting learning environment.

The young people are

“ Literacy is the key to educational success; and for too many children their circumstances are holding them back ”

given one-to-one support from volunteers to increase their confidence and sharpen their skills.

Jude Williams, CEO of The Literacy Pirates, said: “We all know that literacy is the key to educational success; and for too many children their circumstances are holding them back.

“Our Pirate Ships, supported by London Masons, create a fantastic environment to keep going when things get tough.”

Tennis teen's Olympic gold

A TEENAGER with a rare gene disorder, who was told she would never be able to pick up a tennis racket, has returned from the Special Olympic World Games as a double gold medal winner.

Lily Mills, pictured, who is a special educational needs and disability (SEND) student at New City College's Hackney campus, won both the singles and mixed doubles gold in the tennis tournament at the Special Olympics World Games in Abu Dhabi last month.

She has been competing since the age of 12 and is ranked number two in the UK for female tennis player with learning disabilities category.

Lily, now 18, said: “I was really proud to represent Team GB in Abu Dhabi. Tennis has given me opportunities to travel, meet new people and try new things.”

Shed of hope for theatre group

HACKNEY Shed Theatre has been awarded a three-year grant of £67,770 by BBC Children in Need.

The grant will contribute to the performing arts group for young people where participants can explore their creativity within an inclusive space.

Vicki Hambley, artistic and strategic director at Hackney Shed Theatre, said: “We are thrilled to receive continued support from BBC Children in Need. These funds will keep our doors open for another three years.”

BBC Children in Need is currently funding 43 projects across Hackney to a value of £1,818,493.

It awards grants at six points during the year.

A Main Grants Programme is for grants over £10,000 per year to support projects for up to three years.

The Small Grants Programme supports projects for up to three years, and includes grants up to and including £10,000 per year.

Both of these programmes are currently open to applications.

St Mary's Secret Garden gets young people buzzin' with new beekeeping project

A UNIQUE project is attempting to help young people with learning difficulties and mental health problems by teaching them the art of beekeeping.

Launched by St Mary's Secret Garden, E2, the Buzzin' programme aims to teach teens confidence, public speaking and enterprise. The garden's resident beekeeper, Mark Patterson, tutors them in the basics of his job.

Mark said: “Beekeeping is a great medium for cultivating confidence among young people with learning difficulties and mental ill health.”

Buzzin' is also aimed at young people who are not currently in education, employment or training and who have not volunteered before.

The group will learn to identify and create habitats for pollinators and do craft activities with honey and beeswax. They will also lead school groups on bee tours of the garden, and expand their employability by visiting City of London businesses.

Siobhán MacMahon, Community Projects coordinator at the Garden, said: “It will be a great way to get people involved in the garden who would not normally have the chance to work with bees.”

The project is supported by Team London and Thrive LDN.

St Mary's Garden is hosting a taster afternoon on 29 April, from 3pm to 6pm, for people to find out more about the Buzzin' programme.

SCHOOL staff who have dedicated their time to helping Hackney students enjoy learning took centre stage at the second School Stars awards last month.

Richard Mitchell, from Haggerston School, Donal Friel, from London Fields Primary School and Jaki Walcott-Nelson, from Clapton Girls' Academy were chosen by a judging panel from nominations sent in by colleagues, pupils and parents for the positive impact they had on students.

The awards recognise everyone that contributes to school life in Hackney – from teachers to caretakers, cleaners and cooks.

Richard, Behaviour Support Officer, won the School Star award. He was nominated by a colleague for his work supporting and raising the aspirations of students who are labelled as having challenging behaviour. Richard was commended for giving up his free time to work with young people outside school, using his Fridays and Saturdays to coach young people in football.

Richard said: "With a great team, good things can be achieved."

Donal won the Teacher of the Year award. He was nominated by three parents for his kindness, empathy, generosity of spirit, and love of teaching.

Donal said: "I think it's great I won this award, but it is not just me – it's everyone that I work with. Teachers, teaching assistants, children and the parents make this award what it is for me.”

Jaki, Whole School Behaviour Lead, won the Schools Lifetime Achievement award. She was nominated by colleagues for her 20 years' of work at Clapton Girls' Academy.

She said: "It's a real honour to win this award on behalf of myself and my team. Support staff don't always get recognised, but we go above and beyond every day to support the teachers and the students.”

The awards ceremony took place at Hackney Town Hall on 27 March. It was hosted by comedian and presenter Kat B, alongside the Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, and the Deputy Mayor, Cllr Anntoinette Bramble.

The night also paid homage to Council workers who won awards for the work and services they provide for residents.

Cllr Bramble said: "The school community works tirelessly every day to achieve great results and a rich curriculum within our schools, as well as provide support to children and families. In Hackney we provide some of the best schools in the country. This wouldn't be if it was not for the teachers, teaching assistants, cooks, caretakers and administration staff, to name a few."

Showcasing sustainable art

STUDENTS from eight Hackney primary schools held an art exhibition under the theme of 'The UN Goals for Sustainable Development'.

The pupils – from Gainsborough, St John the Baptist, Holy Trinity, St Matthias Church of England, Springfield, St John & St James Church of England, Morningside and De Beauvoir – displayed their artwork at Holy Trinity Church, Dalston, from 27 to 29 March. Nearly 2,000 children, teachers and parents from the Primary Advantage Federation visited the show.

William Patten pupils in Madrid school exchange

PUPILS from William Patten Primary School, N16, were visited by their partner school in Madrid earlier this month. The 38 students from Josep Tarradellas school visited the Stoke Newington school for the day. The two schools have been working collaboratively together since 2014. Craig Porteous, deputy headteacher of William Patten, said: "The recent visit has strengthened the link and will enable future collaborations which support the curriculum at both schools."

Playground has spirit of adventure

CHILDREN at a Springfield Community School in Stamford Hill, N16, are enjoying their new forest-themed adventure playground, which is equipped with a willow dome, high balancing beams and a hammock.

Students chipped in to help Shoreditch-based social enterprise company,

Made From Scratch, to build the playground, voicing their ideas, and even helping to build insect hotels and bird boxes.

The forest play area was opened on 5 April and according to headteacher Fiona Judge, highlights the school's commitment to outdoor learning.

She said: "I'm really pleased with how it has turned out. It's not just a play space but it is also a really great environment for learning."

Lizzy Fleming, director of Made From Scratch, said: "This was a great project to be a part of. It's our passion to inspire young people to change their environment through playful ways. We really love being connected to Hackney and we have created a sanctuary for the imagination of children, not just an obvious playground."

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – a social enterprise restaurant alongside the Regent’s Canal in Shoreditch. This is a trusted chocolate brownie recipe for everyone to enjoy.

Goopy chocolate brownies

Serves: 6-8

Cooking time
30 mins
180C

Ingredients

- 370g melted butter
- 325g dark chocolate
- 170g plain flour
- 2 tsp baking powder
- 100g cocoa powder
- Pinch of salt
- 6 eggs
- 550g golden caster sugar
- Pinch of icing sugar to dust

Method

- Melt the chocolate and butter over a bain-marie until well combined and then remove from heat
- Grease a baking dish with butter and then line

- with baking paper
- Mix the flour, baking powder and cocoa powder (dry ingredients) together and put aside until later
- Whisk the eggs and sugar together until well mixed and slightly pale
- Slowly add the melted chocolate mix to the egg mix and whisk altogether
- Add the dry ingredients and mix altogether
- Pour out the brownie mix into the prepared dish and bake for 30 minutes
- Take out the brownie mix, leave it to cool at room temperature and cut into even portions
- Sprinkle the brownies with icing sugar and serve

New Inn Broadway - public realm improvement scheme

THE Council is seeking the views of residents regarding a proposed scheme to transform New Inn Broadway.

The scheme aims to make the road safer and easier to walk or cycle on, with reduced vehicle dependence and improved air quality.

The results from the scheme should improve walking and cycling conditions within Shoreditch and Hoxton.

Works to improve the environment for pedestrians have already begun at Garden Walk and Bowling Green Walk. The proposals include more trees, plants and seating, as well as better signage and cycle stands.

These proposals also allow for bicycles and vehicles to still use the street after the works are completed.

Introducing these changes will result in the loss of all car parking spaces in New Inn Broadway at present.

For more information about the strategy, and to have your say by 28 April, visit: consultation.hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 2897.

FOURTEEN community groups have been awarded a share of £500,000 by the Council and the City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) through a fund aimed at improving health and wellbeing in the area.

The community groups were asked to demonstrate how their projects could tackle some of the key health and wellbeing problems in the borough. This includes identifying people at risk of falls, improving health and wellbeing at work, supporting people to recover if they have had a life-changing illness or injury, and improving access to health and social care for homeless people and rough sleepers.

Volunteer ambulance team Hatzola Trust was awarded almost £40,000 to help parents, carers and families manage common illnesses closer to home. The aim of the project is to reduce the number of children admitted to hospital A&E with minor illnesses and injuries.

A spokesperson at Hatzola said: "In the next few months we hope to develop our vaccination awareness campaign and develop our 'help ourselves at home first' education in order to minimise unnecessary visits to GPs and A&E departments."

A spokesperson said: "We are on a mission to help people and places thrive by delivering employment and inclusion programmes for those experiencing disadvantage."

Homeless charity Groundswell was given nearly £50,000 to help homeless people and rough sleepers in Hackney access the right health and social care support, by pairing people with volunteers who have also experienced homelessness, and support them through appointments and health services.

Alongside the funding, the groups will also receive support from Council and health service officers to help them succeed and promote their achievements.

The Healthier City and Hackney Fund, thought to be the biggest of its kind in the country, is the second time the Council and the City and Hackney CCG have combined money for this kind of funding.

The next round of grant funding for projects that look to improve health and wellbeing in City and Hackney will open for applications in September.

Derman's talking therapies

A CHARITY for the wellbeing of the Kurdish and Turkish communities is offering a free and dedicated 'talking therapies' service.

Derman's accredited Turkish-speaking therapists provide support from its offices in New North Road, Hoxton, and from GP practices across the area.

Nursel Tas, Derman's chief executive, said: "People come to us not just because we speak their language, but because we understand where they are coming from culturally, such as with their family and relationship issues." People usually see their therapist about once a week for between six and 12 weeks.

Core Sport mental health award

A HACKNEY charity has scooped a prestigious award for using sport to help those with mental health issues across the capital.

Core Sport offers a range of exercise classes, alongside a weight management programme and health checks. Its work was applauded at the Community Sport and Recreation Awards on 15 March, when it was presented with the Mental Health award by the Earl of Wessex. Laura-Jane Connolly, inclusive sports development manager at Core Sport, said: "Core Sport has had an impact for over 1,800 adults with severe and enduring mental health needs in London in the four years it has been running. It has been vital for many in their recovery, leading to a better quality of life."

Health volunteers wanted

HEALTHWATCH Hackney is looking for volunteers with a passion for improving the health and wellbeing of others to ensure residents' voices are heard in decisions about activities and services.

Volunteers will work with the Council, the Clinical Commissioning Group, Homerton hospital and other health and care partners, as well as service managers and clinicians. The role will focus on 'prevention', providing City and Hackney residents with the tools, support and opportunities to live healthier lives.

They will play an important role in shaping decisions on how local activities and services are delivered, and helping organisations better connect with communities and individuals. Volunteers will be given training and expenses for travel, childcare and carers costs.

For more information, visit: bit.ly/2UFP23S; email: info@healthwatchhackney.co.uk; or call: 020 3960 7454.

Funding for posts to support Hackney's rough sleepers

FUNDING for five new posts to support rough sleepers in Hackney has been secured by the Council as part of the Mayor's manifesto commitment to eliminate rough sleeping.

The Council successfully bid to the Ministry of Housing, Communities and Local Government's Rough Sleeping Initiative Fund for £350,000 to fund a rough sleeping co-ordinator to oversee the work the Council and its partners do to support those on Hackney's streets.

It will also fund three outreach workers to engage and work with rough sleepers, supporting them into settled accommodation, and a mental health worker.

All five new roles will work closely with local providers as part of the Hackney Homeless Partnership Board, whose members include the NHS, Citizens Advice Bureau, St Mungos, Shelter, the Hackney Winter Night Shelter and Thamesreach.

Party like it's 1959

THEY say people had to make their own fun back in the day, and these photographs show that people in Hackney have always had a great sense of humour.

On this page, partygoers bury themselves in streamers and a groom is obscured by his wife's dress. A wedding guest 'toasts' a sausage on an electric fire, a man and dog engage in some unwise drinking, while another man drinks out of a huge trophy.

You can see more photographs from Gibson's studio on display at Hackney Museum, on Hackney Archives' Facebook page, and at: flickr.com/photos/hackney\_archives

Hackney Archives, based in Dalston, is carrying out a two-year project to digitise images from Gibson's studio so that they can be shared with local people at events around the borough and online.

A key part of the project involves interviewing people who appear in the photographs so that their stories can be preserved as part of the history of Hackney.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2018. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2018. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, email: mayer@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 2212. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Clare Potter.

ARTICLE 4 DIRECTION

LONDON BOROUGH OF HACKNEY

TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING (GENERAL PERMITTED DEVELOPMENT) (ENGLAND) ORDER 2015 (AS AMENDED)

NOTICE OF CONFIRMING A DIRECTION UNDER ARTICLE 4(1)

The London Borough of Hackney (‘the Council’) made a non-immediate Article 4 Direction (‘the Direction’) on 12 March 2018 under Article 4(1) of the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) (England) Order 2015, as amended. Notice is hereby given that the Direction was confirmed by the Council on 25 March 2019 and comes into force on 8 April 2019.

The Direction removes for buildings and any land within their curtilage permitted development rights for the development described in the below Schedule below (offices to dwellinghouses). Such development shall not be carried out unless planning permission is granted by the Council on an application made to the Council under Part III of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 (as amended).

The Direction applies to the area previously known as the ‘Exemption Area’. This is the area of the borough which was granted exemption from office to residential permitted development rights by Government in May 2013 and includes the Shoreditch and Wenlock neighbourhoods and much of Hoxton, Dalston, Hackney Central and London Fields. The exemption from these permitted development rights expires in May 2019 and will be replaced by this Article 4 Direction.

A copy of the Direction, including a map defining the area covered, is available for inspection on the Council’s website: <http://www.hackney.gov.uk/article-4-directions> or by visiting the Hackney Service Centre, 1 Hillman Street, London, E8 1DY (Ask for the Planning desk, Mon–Fri 10:00am–12:00pm and 2:00pm–4:00pm).

SCHEDULE

The Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) (England) Order 2015, Schedule 2, Part 3, Class O – offices to dwellinghouses:

Development consisting of a change of use of a building and any land within its curtilage from a use falling within Class B1(a) (offices) of the Schedule to the Use Classes Order, to a use falling within Class C3 (dwellinghouses) of that Schedule.
